Some of the major issues he would pursue if elected would be expanded human services for the disabled and aged, based on a sound financial need; election of Public Utility Commission (PUC) members; instead of the current appointments, improved working relationship with teachers to work together for a better preparation in the lower grades for our children.

Mrs. Cherinchak-Cole summarizes herself as "a member of the new breed of people who have joined to Northeastern Pennsylvania because I work here in Lackawanna County, and I know that I can be an important part of the country. I have decided to live here and commit my life, energies, talents, and hopes to our community and people. I hope to be a part of our community that will make our lives richer and more productive."

The potential of our area is unlimited and I know that I can be an important part of the country. I have decided to live here and commit my life, energies, talents, and hopes to our community and people. I hope to be a part of our community that will make our lives richer and more productive."

Mr. Krantz is employed as a research analyst by the state House of Representatives, assigned to work with the Urban Affairs Committee Sub-committee on Third Cities and Counties and as administrative assistant to state representative David Krantz.
